We are both alone with ourselves, And we think the same things. We do not speak to each other in line. We eavesdrop from behind. I desire to know you, and I despise you. I admire you, and I want you to fail. I want to be your better, but you are mine. You look at me and think the same thing!
I know your face, and you know mine. We do not speak. We use the silence to assume. I create an illusion of myself. So that your assumptions of me are bigger than they should be. And you will never know that underneath I am as scared and insecure as you are. But I cannot tell you this. Because it will compromise the illusion. So carefully worn Like my retro silver shirt. I got it for a dollar fifty. That is all I will FALSE magazine is anchored in the arts, but reaches beyond the arts community to engage politics, culture, and literature. Our mission is to produce intelligent journalism, insightful reviews, and relevant commentary on the expansive energy that is reshaping Atlanta and the South.

FALSE is not-for-profit and published quarterly with a 5,000 circulation and growing national subscription base.

Ad rates are low to provide the community with affordable promotion.

False is distributed to cafes, art galleries and book stores in Atlanta and Decatur. Visit falsemagazine.org for more details.
